Allowance

Do you think that kids should have allowances? I think that kids should have an allowances because it teaches them responsibility, gets them prepared for when they become an adult and teaches them how to spend wisely.

When kids get their allowance they can do whatever they want to do with their money! When they buy something they think at the time, that it is the best thing in the world. They use it and use it then they get bored with it and stop using it or it brakes. Then they think about it and know that the next time they get an allowance they will spend it more wisely!

The reason most parents give their kids an allowance is to teach them responsibility. In my family instead of having an allowance we have a sock party and each pair of socks that we fold earns us 25 cents. During the Super Bowl we do the same thing but we throw the socks in the right basket and get a point! That is how me, Levi, and Carmen my sister earn money!

I think that kids should get an allowance because of responsibility, spending their money wisely, learn how they're going to use it in their adult lives. Its good practice and they can learn important lessons. They could possibly even get a bank account? That would train them for their future!
