

Inertubing in the Anchor River

By~~Lia Benner

After I was done blowing up my huge inertube I was so exsosted, I desisted to go floating!! As I went in the water to feel how cold it was on that scorching hot summer day, wasn't that bad. So I put my inertube in the water and just like that I was drifting in the turbid water with life less fish at the bottom. The busy current got me like a tornado out of control! I did not think that it would happen so fast. It felt so weird and scary at the same time. I was walking back from the bank you had to stop at the bank because there is a ginormous dead tree at the end and if you did not stop you would hit it so I walked back to the place I was camping at. The current was pushing me toured the water but I made it.

When I was going down I did not want to do it again. But when I calmed down I did it again and again and again it was so fantastic. And the last time I went down I all most stepped on a moldy dead fish. These are some of the things I saw there strawberry red dead salmon, lime green trees, gooey slimy mud, turbid water, algae covered rocks and lots more. At the end I felt so cold but when I got used to it did not bother me anymore. We tried to have my sister go down but she said the water was to cold. But when she went down with Casey she was fine and she almost wanted to do it again. I had the best time at the Anchor River. I want to do it again!!
